ABOUT US

More than 70 million Americans are affected by digestive disorders. For some people these disorders cause discomfort, embarrassment and a loss of work time. For others, these disorders can be more serious, even life threatening.

PIH Health Digestive Health Services provides one-stop, comprehensive care using the most progressive and effective diagnostic testing and treatments available today. Our dedicated team share a wealth of knowledge and expertise in: peptic ulcer disease; gastroesophageal reflux disease; irritable bowel syndrome; diverticulitis; inflammatory bowel disease (including Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis); swallowing disorders; hemorrhoid treatment; gastrointestinal cancer prevention, diagnosis, and treatment; hepatic disorders; pancreatic and biliary diseases; functional bowel disorders; nutrition support; and related gastrointestinal disorders and concerns.

STREAMLINE COLONOSCOPY SCREENING

PIH Health Digestive Health Services offers the Colon Cancer Prevention Program, a streamline colonoscopy screening program that makes it easy for anyone to schedule a colonoscopy procedure. Anyone who is eligible for a screening colonoscopy and does not have major health concerns can be referred by their primary physician or can contact the Colon Cancer Prevention Program directly. A colon cancer prevention navigator will speak with the patient about their medical history, risk factors and will review details of the procedure. If a patient has health concerns or high risk factors, an appointment to see the gastroenterologist will be scheduled prior to the procedure.
